WILLIAM STANTON:::

1756-1833

William Stanton was the first of this family to come to Canada and thence to Fort Erie. For his service in the army of George the third, he received the rank of General, and was Commissary General of the British Army.

He married Margaret Robertson, who was the first white woman in the district after the Indians left. The General's wife gave birth to 21 children, seven sets of twins and seven other children.

He spent his early life in the village, however in 1822 he was transferred to Amherstburg, to take charge of the west as Commissariat. The General moved there with his wife and a number of his children. He lived to the ripe old age of 77 and is buried in St. Paul's Churchyard.
